Herbert Vollmer, the squad captain, has recovered from the attack of staleness he suffered last summer, and is showing his old time form; Phil Herbert and Ray Walker, the crack sprinters, are travelling faster than ever; Hubbard, the former Lawrenceville star, promises to be a most valuable recruit for the relay and 50-yard events, and there are rattling good candidates for fancy diving in Cagney, Mills, Miller, Smith and Merrill, and a sure point winner for the plunge in Levie.

The reason for this is plain, for Johnston himself is one of the soundest of players, both as to production of stroke and court generalship. He does not place his reliance on rushing the net at every opportunity, on tremendous service and vicious Smashing, but rather on a combination of all that is best in lawn tennis.

In fact, Johnston's game might be called a blending of Eastern and Californian playing methods. The speed of foot that has been characteristic of all the Californians is Johnston's and he possesses the same knack of "killing" the ball with the sharpness and finality that made the great McLoughlin noted a few years back.
